SHOW ANNOUNCEMENT

Lot Twenty One is pleased to announce Shadow Dancers, an exhibition featuring a compelling collection of photographs by the late, Richard Copeland Miller.

Through the medium of black and white photography, Miller portrays the human condition in a rare, lyrical poem that illuminates enigmatic features of universal sadness and the transient nature in which we all live. Yet this darkness is beautiful. The shadows dance with light to create a powerful juxtaposition between hardship and resilience.

Miller's fascination with the extremes of light and dark create strange, ghostlike images that give his work a painterly effect. The technique might be imagined as painting with light. "I'm trying to convey a mood instead of imparting content or specific information," Miller explained to Black & White Magazine in August of 2001.

As Brian Aurand from Photovision stated, "The blur of the photographs casts a spell erasing the sharp lines between memory and experience. It conjures a dance between stillness and movement, drawing out the personal."

Shadow Dancers is a carefully selected collection of Miller's finest pieces that tell his narrative as a photographer and show his own passage through time.

Come celebrate this unique body of work with us on opening night, February 21st, at Lot 21.
